SENATE TO VOTE AUGUST FIRST ON BONE DRY BILL

Will Take Final Action on Sheppard Measure
Proposing Constitutional Amendment

AGREEMENT REACHED BY LEADERS

Conferees Go to Mat With the Food Control
Law. Much to Reconcile

(International News Service.)

Washington, July 26.—Leaders on all sides of the prohibition question drew up an agreement today to have the senate vote Wednesday, August 1, on the Sheppard resolution proposing a nation-wide dry amendment to the constitution. The terms of the agreement would automatically be nullified unless ratified by three-fourths of the state within six years.

This means that if the agreement goes through and the vote can hold 13 states for the next six years the nation will stay wet indefinitely. The drys would have to win 36 states within six years.

Twenty-five states are now classified as dry.

I. N. S. THANKED BY GEN. CROWDER

(International News Service.)

Washington, July 26.—Errorless handling of the national army draft by the International News Service and the hundreds of newspapers that it serves, is appreciated today in a letter received from Provost Marshal General Crowder, who had charge of the drawing.

Gen. Crowder expressed deep appreciation for the co-operation of every newspaper served by this service, and declared they had performed a patriotic duty of no small moment.

Lawrence County is Eradicating Ticks

Four Vats Already in Operation and Fourteen Others Contemplated.

Lawrence county is going after the cattle tick with a vengeance, according to W. W. Cameron, federal inspector, who was here today. Mr. Cameron stated that four dipping vats had already been installed and arrangements made for installing fourteen others. The cement and sand for the vats is furnished by the county, which is also employing an inspector to assist in the dipping. The federal government will furnish an additional man in the early fall. The county will vote for eradication when the election is called next year, it is now confidently predicted.

Owing to the fact that Morgan and Lawrence counties adjoin, the eradication of the tick in the latter county will permit the movement of cattle from one county to the other, and in this way will be of great benefit to both.

States to Get Credit For Volunteers on Next Draft

Men who Have Enlisted Since June 30 Do Not Count This Time

(International News Service.)

Washington, July 26.—Every enlisted man will be credited to his state when the second increment of the new national army is drawn, according to announcement made today from the office of Provost Marshal General Crowder.

Constant protests are coming from the governors of the various states from localities that failed to understand that no credit has been allowed to this increment for men enlisted in

FOOD CONTROL CONFEREES TACKLE BIG PROBLEM.

(International News Service.)

Washington, July 26.—The food control bill conferees went to the mat today to begin their wrestling match with the most formidable and complicated differences ever laid before a congressional conference committee.

Here are some of the things they must decide: The prohibition question, the price of wheat, whether to place food control in the hands of Herbert C. Hoover exclusively or a food commission of three, whether to back up the president in his objection to the creation of a joint congressional war committee. There are many other knots to be untied. It is doubtful whether the measure will be in the president's hands within ten days, as the conference agreement will meet opposition when referred back to the senate and house. Evidence grows that the Smoot whiskey-commandeering amendment will be thrown out. It is believed the Sheppard nation-wide prohibition resolution is the solution.

Gen. Crowder expressed deep appreciation for the co-operation of every newspaper served by this service, and declared they had performed a patriotic duty of no small moment.

City Gets Judgement Against J. E. Penny

Wins Suit Involving Payment of Street Assessments.

The second of several suits brought by the city of New Decatur against J. E. Penny, of Birmingham, large local property holder, was decided in favor of the city by a jury in the Morgan county circuit court Wednesday afternoon. The city was given a judgment for the full amount of street assessments made against Mr. Penny's property, with interest at 8 per cent for the past three years. There are several of these suits, and others will be heard at this term of court. The city was represented in the litigation by City Attorney Teavis Tidwell and E. W. Godbey.

WILSON TO JOLT DEFENSE COUNCIL

PRESIDENT TO RE-ORGANIZE THE BODY WHILE HE HAS HAND IN

(International News Service.)

Washington, July 26.—Complete re-organization of the committees of the Council of National Defense will be announced by President Wilson in the very near future, possibly late today.

This re-organization will result in a revolutionary change in those subdivisions which have much to do with the successful conduct of the war.

Already, however, it is apparent that organized labor will not be entirely satisfied with the proposed changes, as the Federation of Labor has demanded that labor be fully recognized on every committee. Members of the council today refused to speculate on the re-organization in advance of the president's announcement.

Frank Frohoff Has Enlisted in Navy

Well-Known Baseball Player Accept- ed for Country's Service.

Frank Frohoff, star outer gardener of the Y. M. C. A. baseball team for several seasons past, and one of Albany's best known and most popular young men, has been accepted for service in the navy and has left for Norfolk, Va., to enter training. He enlisted as a mechanic and will probably be assigned to duty on one of the big battleships.

The fact that Mr. Frohoff was accepted is a high compliment to his worth, as the naval branch of the service is now recruited practically to war strength, and is very rigid in all its requirements. The Huntsville station is said to have orders to accept less than half a dozen men a week. Only men of perfect physique and exceptional qualifications are now being enlisted.

Mr. Frohoff has many friends in Albany and Decatur who will watch his career with interest.

Trade Commission Wants Legislation

(International News Service.)

Washington, July 26.—Legislation to protect the public in war times against unreasonable prices not only when such prices result from unlawful agencies, but also where they arise merely out of abnormal conditions, was recommended to congress today by the federal trade commission in its report on the investigation of the sudden jump upwards in the price of United States flags.

Drafted Men Hurry to Enlist; Ten Accepted Locally Today

The army recruiting station of Decatur in charge of Sergeant Ball, is a beehive of industry today, following the announcement that those drafted for the first army may enlist. So busy is Sergeant Ball that Sergeant F. P. Hibbert has come down from Huntsville to help him. Ten men have been signed up today and others are looked for this evening and tonight.

Two brothers, John and James Johnson, of near Somerville, enlisted this morning to become bakers. They were drafted among the first 556 and a younger brother registered, but was not drawn among the first numbers.

Of the others who will go to Birmingham this afternoon are O's and Henry Phillips, Culinan; Joe D. Wallace, Elkmont; Sherly Rogers, Tom Hamlin, Louis McMullen, Willie Neal, Francis Rice, Huntsville.

One of the boys did not know the alphabet, so the sergeant was forced to teach him some letters before he could test his eyes.

Flight of Mutinous Troops

(International News Service.)

Petrograd, July 26.—Five women soldiers, members of the "Battalion of Death," were killed in the first engagement with the Germans, said a dispatch today. The number wounded was not stated.

The women went to the front less than three weeks ago, determined to shame the peace agitators and mutinous soldiers into action by their own courage. Their boldness was more than proved in their first fight.

London, July 26.—"The collapse of the Russian offensive in Galicia is an appalling blow," said a Petrograd dispatch printed in the Morning Post today.

The telegram continues: "It is known that never before in this war has Russia put into the field such an enormous army as on this front, and never before has any Russian army been so lavishly supplied with the technical adjuncts to fighting capacity."

M'ADOO SURPRISED BY NEW DEMAND

DIDN'T KNOW THAT ANOTHER FIVE BILLION WAS NEEDED.

(International News Service.)

Washington, July 26.—The war department's demand for $5,000,000,000 for the prosecution of the war took Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo completely by surprise and he is at a loss to know how to find new sources of revenue, it was learned today.

Mr. McAdoo was not taken into the confidence of the war department until a short time before the estimate was submitted to him for transmission to congress. Immediately he set experts of the internal revenue bureau to work figuring out amounts which could be raised by various sources.

U-Boat Toll For Week Is Larger

Twenty-One Vessels of More Than 1,600 Tons Sunk.

London, July 26.—Twenty-one British vessels of more than 1,600 tons each and three of less than 1,600 tons each were sunk last week by mines or submarines, according to the admiralty report on shipping losses.

The losses inflicted upon the Russians is said by Berlin advices to be the heaviest of the whole war. Casualties among the officers were particularly severe.

Dictator Kerensky and Gen. Korniloff are taking the most drastic measures to restore discipline in the army. Scores of executions are occurring daily where the troops refuse to obey their officers or retire in the face of Austro-German attacks.

In the Stanislau sector the Russians have fallen back about 40 miles from the most advanced point reached by them.

Lawn Party at the "Y" Friday Night

Tomorrow night there will be big doings at the "Y." You had better make your arrangements to go right now. Pat Hanley will box K. T. Trester five rounds. Earle Turner will wrestle Chas. Royer for thirty minutes. The South Side quartet will spread their sweetest harmonies all over the front lawn. The symphony string orchestra will furnish music. Refreshments will be served.

All new members are urged to come out and get acquainted. A most enjoyable evening is promised all who come. The ladies are especially invited.

DAILY CIRCULATION GROWS FAST

County-wide interest in the recent drawing of men for the national army, stirring developments in the various theatres of war, and the fact that America is now really getting into the war in earnest, have combined to stimulate the circulation of the Daily. During the past week the Daily has added 75 new subscribers, and that without solicitation.

The Daily claims to have the healthiest circulation of any newspaper in the state. Every bit of it is paid up—not a paper goes out on credit, and all mail subscriptions are paid in advance. No dead wood is allowed, no free copies are sent.

The circulation of the Daily is practically double what it was two years ago.

The Daily twice each year makes a sworn statement of its circulation, in conformity with a ruling of the United States postal department. All daily newspapers are required to do this, weekly papers being exempted from the provisions of the regulation.

The Daily is now, through the co-operation of the Albany post office, making every afternoon train leaving either Albany or Decatur. This is the first time that all trains have been made.

Advertisers are invited to call at the Daily office and look over its circulation lists. Sworn statements of circulation furnished to advertisers on request.

THE SERIOUSNESS OF THE WAR IS NOT MINIMIZED.

The Associated Press, which is as near a semi-official news agency as the nation knows, its policy being to work close to every administration, whether republican or democratic, this morning sent out from Washington a news dispatch that is peculiarly significant.

"No attempt is made here to minimize the seriousness of the situation in the war theatres of Europe," is the prelude to a long news article that is far from reassuring. From this introductory, the writer, with all the skill of a George Creel awakening the public to the dangers of German espionage, launches into a general review of a situation that must admittedly be classified as "gloomy."

"For the United States, the Russian collapse must have an immediate and direct bearing. It will, if the German general staff presses its advantage, release additional German forces to bolster up the western front, where American forces are to be engaged.

The German line in the west has not been seriously impaired at any point, officers here believe," the article says, in discussing the situation on the western front. And then the writer dips his pen into blacker ink and paints the picture darker still by admitting that German successes in Belgium have strengthened the "Hindenburg line," which he admits to be practically impregnable now.

To make bad matters worse, we are told: "Reports received from France, official and unofficial, so far as known, give no cheering picture of what must be done." And it is admitted: "American transportation problems, both on land and sea, are constantly increasing in scope."

The Associated Press is not unpatriotic, and it does not send out a news story of this nature without a cause. The article reads almost as it were "inspired," so openly and candidly does it discuss the situation abroad. It concludes with one cheering sentence: "Admitting all these points, however, there is no sign of discouragement among American officials. President Wilson's determination that the nation, not merely an army, must be made ready for war is being carried out determinedly and apparently with confidence that in time men and supplies can be got to France in sufficient force to make certain the result."

This, in effect, is a warning that the burden laid down by Russia is to be picked up by the United States. Where the Bear quits, America must begin, and under less favorable circumstances. This great republic is to be thrown into the war in deadly earnest, its every resource consecrated to the task of leveling autocracy and restoring democracy to the world. The price that is to be paid is one that will appall the nation—but there will be no turning back.

A CINCINNATI REFORM.

The city of Cincinnati, if it adopts an ordinance that will be presented to the council by Henry K. Gibson, an attorney, will inaugurate a reform that should extend to the very limits of the United States. The ordinance would compel all newspapers published in a foreign language to print alongside every statement a translation in English, all vouched for in sworn statements. The ordinance provides a $500 fine and imprisonment for a second offense. The matter might be carried further, even to the congress of the United States, and the privileges of the mail might be denied to any publication that violated the letter of such a law. There would be less anti-American propaganda waged if unpatriotic and seditious periodicals were required to blazon their utterances in pure English that every genuine American citizen could read without the aid of an interpreter.

DRAFTING ALIENS FOR SERVICE IN THE AMERICAN ARMY.

The Chamberlain resolution, now before a senate committee, declaring aliens other than subjects of the central powers subject to the draft, is likely to be adopted by the American congress unless the state department renders an adverse opinion, according to late press dispatches. The resolution is one that possesses merit, yet it is doubtful if this is the wisest way to handle the alien problem.

There is not the slightest doubt that were America at war with Germany alone and should attempt to impress British subjects into our armies, that there would be a rather pronounced howl raised by the British lion. And, vice versa, should any other power attempt to force our nationals into its military service, there would be a most vigorous protest made by the United States. The "right of search" in itself was deemed sufficient cause for declaration of war upon England in 1812.

International law will hardly permit the United States to draft alien citizens of any nation. If there are no specific treaties to that effect, the general principle is so broad that it cannot very readily be circumvented except upon the theory that our allies in the present war would not seriously object to anything that America might do not in conflict with their interests. A dangerous precedent, however, would be established, one that could give grave trouble in the days to come.

The common-sense thing to do would be for Britain, France, Italy, Russia, and Greece to themselves draft their citizens now in America into their own armies. If the man power of these nations is being depleted, would not America be a fruitful field for recruiting? There are thousands of aliens here who are subjects of the allied governments. Many of them came over to escape military service at home. It is hardly fair for American men to be thrust into the trenches to take the place of these "slackers."

The shipping board has walked the plank.

German airmen who are seeking the American camp in Paris may find it less difficult to locate the "Savaries" by waiting until next summer and conducting their search in Berlin.

America still believes that the Russians will never be overtaken.

The action of some of our public men remove all doubt as to where the United States can get the timber for that proposed wooden fleet.

Some American magazine writers possess those onesided imaginations that are controlled altogether by ear.

Even if Germany can hold out for ten years, there is no use in continually referring to the fact.

It's up to someone to consult the Tuscaloosa Board of Trade and find out just where the nitrate plant will be located next.

That spirit that pulls for new industries is as fine as silk.

The editorial writers of the Chicago Tribune must be relieved that public attention has been distracted from East St. Louis to Tarnopol.

DRINK A CUP OF HEMO EVERY DAY

Or perhaps two cups, if you are terribly run down and need a revitalizing food tonic.

HEMO is a nourishing food, not a drug. Makes a delicious drink by merely adding water. Contains the combined extractions of such well known nutrients as Milk, Wheat and Beef, together with the tonic properties of Malt and Iron. Thousands of doctors have endorsed HEMO and are using it daily in all cases of general debility caused by anemia, or malnutrition.

An excellent food for convalescents, invalids or the aged. We suggest that you try a 50c package with our guarantee of satisfaction.

FURTHER LOANS TO ALLIES. It is now settled that the total of $3,000,000,000 already advanced by the United States to the entente allies will be supplemented by further loans to a like amount, so that the grand aggregate of American loans to the allied treasuries will be $6,000,000,000. This is not a large sum either for the lender or the borrowers, and compared with the expenditures of Great Britain, France and Russia during the first three years of the war, seems small by comparison. It is to be remembered, however, that these advances do not constitute loans in the ordinary sense, but represent credit used up by the allied governments, for the purchase of supplies and war munitions on this side of the Atlantic, so that the entire amount will be spent in the United States.

This is a very different proposition than it would be if the advances were ordinary loans and represented cash paid over to the borrowers for meeting war expenditures at home. Up to date, no one of the allies has borrowed any real money abroad, but have simply obtained credit available for making purchases in this or some other country, and thus postponing to a more convenient day payment for what was needed to carry on the war. Before the present extra session adjourns, congress will probably be asked to authorize a new loan of $3,000,000,000 for use in the manner above described.

Obviously, no part of these loans cuts any figure in the war expenditure of the government, which during the first fiscal year of the struggle may aggregate ten billion dollars. There could not be a more forcible way of setting forth the growth in wealth in this country since the civil war. Today, the United States makes loans, collects war taxes and issues Liberty Bonds aggregating more than the total wealth of this country before the civil war, and this financial fact does not arouse a second thought. A nation the wealth of which totals $225,000,000,000 is in a position to do things in a free and easy manner without pinching the money which it spends.

This country is worth more than Great Britain, France and Germany were prior to the first of August, 1914. —American Banker.

ASK THE PRICE; DON'T BEG.

The publishers of the average small city dailies or the weekly newspapers have not been making a fortune out of their business, if they have not done this under normal conditions—how can they expect to break even under present conditions?

There is just one of two things going to happen. Either the papers are going to earn at least less money than they did previously, or the publishers are going to raise prices to meet the raise both in material and in labor.

The public accepts the raise in groceries, in dry goods, in fuel, in fact in everything they buy, and they accept it as a matter of course, because the merchant does not apologize for asking the increase. And the public will accept a raise in the price of a newspaper, or the merchant will accept a raise in the price of advertising space in just the same way if the publisher asks for it on the ground that it is his due, and not simply because he cannot live without it.

Too many newspaper publishers go to their public with a plea for support instead of going to them with something to sell that is worth the price that is asked for it. The publisher cannot afford to beg, any more than the groceryman can afford to beg. He must make a saleable product and sell it at a profit. And the great majority of the newspapers are saleable products. They will sell at a profitable price if the price is asked.—Publishers' Auxiliary.

AMERICAN HERO OF AIR

Corporal James Norman Hall of Colfax, Inc., member of the Lafayette Flying Squadron, who is now in Soissons hospital after a single-handed battle with eight German warplanes. Corporal Hall was flying over the German lines when attacked by a German biplane. After a hot encounter seven other German machines came to the assistance of the biplane and in that unequal fight Hall was shot through the lung. He managed, however, with great courage and coolness to bring his machine down within the French lines. He fainted just before landing, but had strength and presence of mind to cut off the gasoline and ease the landing so that the machine was not destroyed. This daring member of the corps of Americans flying for France joined the American squadron recently after being wounded in the British army and discharged. He is the son of Mrs. A. W. Hall of Colfax, and is author of "Kitchener's Mob." Before the war he was a newsman in Boston.

TAKING POISON OUT OF SALT

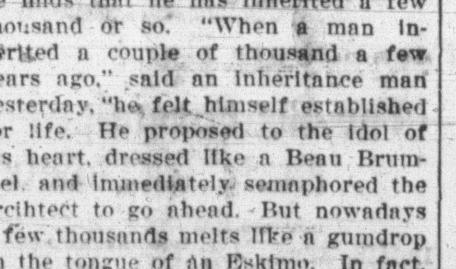

World's Supply Seems to Be Inexhaustible But None of It is Wholly Pure Until Treated.

As far as the supply of salt goes it is estimated that there is enough available to last forever. Michigan alone, it is said, claims to be able to supply the whole world for 2,000 years with all the salt it needs. But no matter how plentiful salt may be, it has the disadvantage of being a poison, for no salt is wholly pure. Thus, if the poison in salt can be eliminated vast additional sources will be available.

Scientists have come to the front and have tackled the problem successfully. By adding a solution of just the right amount of sulphate of soda, the barium or poison in the salt is changed to sulphate, and with it is removed the pink or brownish color due to iron salts. Thus is made available an unlimited supply of salt, which means more raw material for the chemical industries, because the barium salt is used for making ice.

HIS SHOES MUST FIT

Luminous Rifle Sights.

Rifle sights that can be used at night are the subject of a United States patent recently granted to Britanno Scliar del Borgo of Paris, France. These sights consist of small chambers containing radioactive material whose glow can be seen by the marksman. The chambers are provided with lenses to protect their contents. These special night sights are arranged on a rifle in the usual manner—back sights and fore sights—and the marksman simply lines up the faint spots of light with the target. Two chambers or lights are provided for the fore sights and two for the back sights. Two lenses are provided for the fore sights and two for the back sights. An unusually good program, entitled "Bullets," will be given, and an L-Ko comedy picture will be shown. This company has been pleasing the patrons of the theatre all week, and tonight the fun promises to be fast and furious.

BIGGEST OF THE BIG GUNS

Giant Weapons of United States Defending Panama Canal Shoot Projectiles Weighing Over Ton.

It is not easy to understand what the power of a gun really is—its penetrating and destructive power, observes Popular Science. What we call a 15-inch gun—which means one whose muzzle or hollow part is 15 inches in diameter—will hurl a shell right through a plate or wall of the hardest steel 12 inches thick seven miles from the muzzle. The power of the very largest land guns ever made—the German howitzers or 165 guns—is such that one of their missiles cracks open a steel and concrete fort as if it were a nut.

There are two classes of guns—naval guns and army or land guns. Because they can be manipulated more easily than those of a ship, land guns are the heavier. From eight to ten miles is the greatest distance that a gunner can cover successfully at sea. The largest naval gun is the 15-inch English gun on the famous super-dreadnaught and the largest land gun is the German howitzer. Of the two the naval gun fires a shell weighing over half a ton, while the other fires a projectile a ton in weight. But the new giant 16-inch guns of the United States, defending the Panama canal and New York at Sandy Hook, shoot projectiles weighing 2,370 pounds, which is over a ton. These immense steel guns can sink a ship before it has really come into sight on the horizon, the location of the battleship having been determined by airplane or tower.

It is true that I had been feeling very badly for some time, up to two weeks ago," said Mr. Spencer, "and I thought at times my very back would break. I had a tired, sluggish feeling, was languid, felt all tired out most of the time. My liver didn't work right, I suffered from constipation, had sour stomach, my head ached day and night, and, as I just said, I thought sometimes my very back would simply break in two.

"A friend of mine said if I would take Vin Hepatica, the Universal System Purifier and Tonic, I wouldn't have to suffer that way, but would be well again in a very short while.

"I went and got a bottle of Vin Hepatica and I want to say right here that the change in my condition is nothing short of marvelous. Where only a short while ago I could hardly eat anything that would agree with me, I can eat anything from crackers to sauerkraut and rig knuckles. I sleep as soundly and sweetly as anyone ever slept and feel fine and refreshed when I get up in the morning. They told me that there was health in every drop of Vin Hepatica and there is."

Vin Hepatica is a real medicine. It is a combination of eight of the best known and most powerful natural herbal remedies in the world as is shown on the carton which holds the bottle. It is nature's own medicine for indigestion, constipation, nervousness, sleeplessness, kidney trouble and for cleaning out and toning up the system.

HIS EXCUSE

The Rich Father—Why don't you go to work? If you only knew how much happiness work would bring you, you'd start in at once.

His Son—Dad, I'm living a life of self-denial. I'm denying myself all happiness.

DRASTIC MEASURES

Adelaide—I hear George calls at your house almost every evening.

Cornelia—Yes; and I have tried every plan I can think of to make him stay away, but in vain.

Adelaide—Why don't you sing for him?

A SHAMELESS WISH

Germans Take Pictures Showing Soldiers Distributing Bread Among Hungry Populace.

That seeing is not necessarily believing, where motion picture camera is employed for purposes of influencing public opinion, is shown by an article in the Princeton Alumni, describing a visit to a Belgian village, occupied by German troops. The correspondent writes:

In the middle of the scene was a little line of ragged Belgian men, women and children. They had been gathered from the nearby streets. They seemed much frightened. Appeared a dozen underofficers and privates carrying loaves of bread. These they thrust into the hands of the people in the line, while in a corner the clicking camera recorded the touching scene, to be shown in Germany and Austria and in neutral countries throughout the world, of "Kind-Hearted Prussians Feeding the Belgian Populace."

That was what the camera showed. But what it did not show were the fields of Kansas and Manitoba, or the ships of the American commission that had brought the wheat that had been converted into the flour from which those loaves were made, or the American dollar sign indicating who had paid for the loaves, or even the Belgian agents to whom the distribution was the morning and evening work. That day these agents had been thrust aside and their bread taken from them. "On this occasion," they were told, "our soldiers will perform your task. You can leave the loaves and go home." I thought I had a story to tell. I was disappointed when my description fell rather flat. "We have heard all about it before," men informed me. "That comedy is being staged from time to time all over Belgium. We don't mind their taking pictures, but we wish they would leave our bread alone."

SUMPIN' LACKING

He—Yes, I shall will my brain to science when I die.

She—I certainly will be interested in finding out what's the matter with me.

Artificial Sunshine

Among the efforts being made by England to get better crops, on account of the threatened food crisis, one of the most interesting is an experiment in growing cereals and other field crops with the aid of "artificial sunshine," provided by overhead electric current. This experiment, under the supervision of V. H. Blackman, professor of plant physiology and pathology at South Kensington, is being carried out at Huntington court farm, near Hereford. The purpose of the experiments is to continue on a large scale work done during the last few years near Dumfries, where in 1916 an increase of about 50 per cent in grain and 85 per cent in straw was obtained on a crop of oats.

Every tick is sucking at the nation's commissary.

Don't let ticks entrench themselves in the hides of your cattle.

That dipping vat will help keep our navy afloat and our armies afield.

Give the ticks a ticket to the dipping vat.

The more ticks, the fewer pounds of meat, quarts of milk, pats of butter.

If you really believe in efficiency, take ticks off and put leeches on—do the same work but faster.

The days of cupping for blood are over—dip that tick.

A dipping vat may not be able to beat a battleship, but it can help feed the navy.

How much of your feed is going to fatten blood-sucking ticks?

Every dipping vat is a solid foundation for the nation's food storehouse.

Evangelistic Day For State Sunday Schools

Alabama Association to Make Drive to Get Children into Church.

By recent action the state executive committee of the Alabama Sunday School Association has decided to set apart one Sunday this year for a statewide evangelistic effort in all Sunday schools throughout Alabama. It has been ascertained that approximately 85 per cent of those who join the church today come out of the Sunday school; yet in spite of this fact a very large number of Sunday school pupils are said to drift out of the Sunday school without ever having definitely entered upon a Christian life and united with the church. It is said also that many Sunday schools at present have no definite and systematic plan for evangelistic work among the unsaved in their membership, and hundreds of Sunday schools in Alabama last year reported "no additions to the church."

In view of these facts, the Alabama Sunday School Association has arranged for a concerted effort throughout the state, all Sunday schools being invited to take part, in order that every Sunday school member, not already a Christian, may be brought face to face with the necessity for a definite decision. The exact date for this campaign will be announced later and detailed plans will be sent to all Sunday school superintendents. It is believed that this is the first time that a concerted state-wide effort of this sort has been carried out, and leaders of the Sunday school workers in Alabama are looking forward to large results.

Irish Home Rulers Down to Business

(International News Service.)
Dublin, July 26.—The Irish Home Rule convention at Trinity College got down to real business today following the initial session on Wednesday when organization was perfected. The selection of Sir Horace Plunkett as chairman of the convention seems to give general satisfaction. So far there has been only one slight outburst of disorder.

Life Was a Misery

Mrs. F. M. Jones, of Palmer, Okla., writes:

"From the time I entered into womanhood . . . I looked with dread from one month to the next. I suffered with my back and bearing-down pain, until life to me was a misery. I would think I could not endure the pain any longer, and I gradually got worse. . . . Nothing seemed to help me until, one day, . . . I decided to

The Woman's Tonic

"I took four bottles," Mrs. Jones goes on to say, "and was not only greatly relieved, but can truthfully say that I have not a pain . . .

"It has now been two years since I took Cardui, and I am still in good health. . . . I would advise any woman or girl to use Cardui who is a sufferer from any female trouble."

If you suffer pain caused from womanly trouble, or if you feel the need of a good strengthening tonic to build up your run-down system, take the advice of Mrs. Jones. Try Cardui. It helped her. We believe it will help you.

Matchmaking

"An' ye'll be thinkin' it over," said Mrs. O'Neill, "for me an' ould Father have fixed it up betwixt us, an' it'll be as soon as ever Lent is come an' gone."

"Deed an' I won't thin," said her son angrily; and to emphasize his words he gave the peat fire such a savage kick that a burning sod hopped right into the middle of the earthen floor.

"Och, havin' be good to me! Will ye be after burnin' the place on me?"

"An' ye might know that me and Norah Maloney has been spakin' this long whiles, since, an' for why should I be after givin' her the go-by?"

"Norah Maloney!" said his mother, shrilly. "It's pity help me! Is it at me buriyin' ye was wantin' to be? An' sure it won't be long if ye marry the likes of her, not that I could rest aisy in me grave if I knew that Norah Maloney, wid her quare, rough ways, an' the big fate of her was travadin' through the place, an' not a bit of me chinny would be left in a wake. No, it's not me could slape at all at all if I knew me chinny was clatterin' through her hands, an' it belongin' to me own mother."

"The divil take the chinny—what would we want wid it at all?"

"An' not a bit of it will ye have. Sure I'd sooner have it to me cousin in Belfast, an' I'll not be sure but I'll be goin' there myself to end me days on ye."

"Bedad, go aisy now," said Con, scratching his curly head in much mental perturbation at the sight of his old mother's tears. "There's no need to be flyin' out like an ould scoldin' him. Sure, a man's got a right to be after choosin' his own wife."

"Troth, an' what do ye know about the choosin'? A bit of a gossoon like yerself—riddy to take the first fool that has the laugh at ye!"

"If ye're mainin' Norah—"

"An' who else? A great bean pole wid the red chakes of her and bould, black eyes rollin' in her hid like beans on the scramble."

"Hould yer tongue," said the immensely loved lover, not relishing this realistic description of his lady love's charms.

"An' hould yours," said his equally exasperated mother.

But the next moment she had put her hand wheelingly upon his shoulder, and the frown on Con's brow cleared a little.

"Come, now, avic, sure it's a bad-timered ould woman I am to be spakin' cross to me bhoys. But ye won't go to be breakin' the illigant match I've been makin' for yerself, an' it's Biddy Mulrane is the purty colleen, an' ould Father is a warm man, an' achin' to have ye for his son, an' there'll be sivin' pigs to come wid her—not to spoke of a couple of chairs and a chist of drawers that will be settin' gran' in that corner by the dure."

"If I marry at all—an' what wid the botheration of it I'm not after wantin' to be married at all—it'll be Norah Maloney."

"It'll not," she said with a firmness that more than equaled his own.

"An' there's no more to be said, for the match is made, an' ye'll not be bringin' the disgrace on me wid your nonsense."

And the next day, when Con went up the boren to see old Mick Doolin about a bit of fresh thatching, he came full upon his prospective bride, clattering down with a couple of cans for water—the water in the barrels never being to her father's likin' for his "tay."

Con knew Biddy Mulrane as well as he knew his own face. They had been at school together, and the rough-haired and sharp-tongued little gipsy had got the best of him many a time. She was not unlike a needle, thought Con discontentedly, as he eyed her tall, slender figure, as she came down the boren with her light and springy step. "As thin as a darning needle, an' not a bit of rid in the face of her, an' eyes too big for her hid," he went on, mentally contrasting her with the ample charms of Norah Maloney—greatly to the latter's advantage in every way.

When Biddy saw him she came to a full stop, and he could not complain of her want of color then, for she declared war with a red flag in her cheeks and eyes that flashed defiance.

"What are ye after wantin'?" she demanded fiercely. "If it's myself, you've come the wrong road. I'm not goin' to take up wid the likes of you, and so I tell you."

"Bedad, I'm not wantin' ye at all," said Con, ungallantly. "It's Mick the thatcher I'm wantin', not a sharp-tongued wan like yourself. An' the road's none of your ownin' whin it comes to that."

The girl paused irresolutely, and her angry gaze traveled over him scornfully. She saw no comeliness in his tall, young figure, in the light brown curls that showed beneath his old hat, the dark blue of his eye, or the clear brown of his skin, for beauty is in the eyes of the beholder, and Biddy had another in mind at the moment.

"Then you haven't been hearin' that the ould schamers have been fixin' up a match betwixt the two of us?"

"Faix, I've heard that—I have been havin' a double dose of it, an' it's no more to me likin' than to your own."

"Thin' why don't ye tell them so, ye big gawk, instid of takin' it like a great shape?"

"Behab, it's black in the face I've been talkin', an' no manner at all good, for it would be a dale easier to move the mountin' than herself whin she's takin' wid anything."

He brought out his pipe, and commenced to fill it with the air of one who had ceased to look with any enjoyment upon creature comforts.

"An' me father tuk wid the same complain, sayin' he'll have his riverence at me, an' bringin' the disgrace on him," groaned the exasperated Biddy. "Och, it's wearin' me into a fever!"

She dropped her menacing air and drew a little closer to her companion in misfortune.

"It's heart sore I am at it all, for I've been spakin' wid a bhoys from Ballyrane since a wake before Christmas."

"An' it's myself," said Con, dismissively, "that has been thinkin' of Norah Maloney longer than that."

"Norah Maloney! She's a square, big, bouncing crathur. Well, ye're in luck's way, for there's plenty of her."

"What do you mane?" demanded Con wrathfully.

"Mercy on us! Kape your timper now. What'll ye be sayin' in that great mountin'—"

"Till I be thankin' ye to kape a civil tongue in your hid. There's more thin wan that says Norah Maloney is the finest crathur in Donegal."

"Do they now?" with a look of innocent surprise that raised Con on bolling point. "Thin it's not myself that will say wan word more, an' it's me self that hopes ye'll get her, big an' all as she is, an' your cabia not bein' over large, maythur. Well, I can't stop wid ye for, I'm after watchin' for Larry Doherty passin', sayin' that he's been wornin' at the great house, an' I'm wearin' for a sight of him."

"Larry Doherty! Bedad it's aisy to plaze ye are wid that little quarter fardin' of a tallor; sure it'd take sivin of the likes of him to make wan decent sized man."

Biddy's gray eyes flashed ominously.

"I'd a daile raythur have his little finger than my great six-footed gawk like yourself."

"Would ye now?" said Con—rather taken aback at such an attack upon himself. "Well, there's everywan to his taste, and ye'll have to be mindin' Larry when ye get him, or maybe ye'll be treadin' on him, sayin' he's so small."

"I'll be biddin' ye good evenin'—I've no time to waste collogin' wid the likes of you."

"Nor myself. But the little tallor, havin' help him, is like to have the worst of it, not that he'll be short of nadies whin your tongue's handy."

And with the unusual honor of the last word, for indignation had silenced his adversary, he went on his way with his mind divided between his own misfortunes and the bad taste of some other people.

For some time the two victims of parental authority and matchmaking kept rigorously apart, but one morning he went up the boren at a time when Biddy thought him at the other side of the mountain, and he came upon her full at the edge of the big bog.

By the wild look in her eyes it was seen that she meditated escape, but before she could turn and fly Con had both his arms around her and had made her prisoner.

"Bedad, I've been huntin' over the place till I'm near demited."

"She's not here," said Biddy, raising for an instant a pair of gravely innocent eyes.

"Who? Sure, haven't I got her in me two arms?"

"Norah Maloney. I saw her go by in minutes since. If you'll hurry you'll be after catchin' her up."

"The divil a strop am I goin' after her," said the shameless Con. "It's myself that I'm wantin', Biddy."

"Sure, I'm not a great rid-faced—"

she began, falteringly.

"Ye're not, the sahds of praised."

"An' I've got a timper as sharp as a nadie."

"Thim as says that don't know a swat wan whin they say it."

"An' not a fut's strop ud ye be comin' my road—"

"Och, Biddy, darlin', have done!"

"Wouldn't I be just trapesht from wan end of Donegal to the other with your heart at the end of it all! An'—an' if myself is not a quare little shrimp of a patchin' tallor, I'm just—"

"Con," she whispered, nestling up to him, and lifted her lips to meet the audacious ones that were seeking hers.—Elizabeth M. Moon in Black and White.

Russians Flee Before the German Advance

RUSSIAN SITUATION IS NOT ENTIRELY HOPELESS.

(International News Service.)

Washington, July 26.—The administration does not consider the Russian situation entirely hopeless. It believes that Premier Kerensky will be able to patch up the crippled war machine. His task, officials admit, is very serious, but they feel certain that eventually the Russian army will be rallied and take its place as a real menace to the Austro-German hordes.

Officials of the war and state department today emphasized this belief.

Officials today continued to make it plain that the United States is up against the biggest game in its history.

GERMANS AND FRENCH

BOTH REPORT GAINS.

(International News Service.)

Paris, July 26.—Gains for the Germans on the Aisne river front and for the French in Champagne were reported in the communiqué issued by the French war office today.

East of Hurtebise farm and south of Le Bovalle, north of the Aisne river, the Germans drove forward in great force, occupying first line trenches of the French. Near Aubeville in Champagne the French drove the Germans from some trenches, inflicting heavy losses.

CHEMISTS PERFECT A DE-NAUSEATED CALOMEL TABLET

Retains All Medicinal Virtues But Purified From Dangerous and Unpleasant Effects—Now on Sale Here Under the Name, "Calotabs."

Science has given us smokeless powder, wireless telegraphy, colorless iodine and tasteless quinine—now comes the good news for everybody that the pharmaceutical chemists have at last perfected a nauseating calomel tablet that does all the work of the old-style calomel without the slightest danger, griping, nausea or sickening after-effects.

After the most extensive and critical tests, all of which proved eminently successful, the new tablet known as "Calotabs" is now on sale at the local drug stores. It presents all of
